Randy Ryan, a prominent Republican consultant in North Carolina, is under fire after the political blog DailyKos.com published a report yesterday accusing him of using state and federal resources to illegally intimidate potential voters in favor of his clients. Mr. Ryan works closely with Mr. Andrew Breitbart, the founder of the "news" site Breitbart.com. Breitbart.com called out Politico.com for coverage of the story, saying Mr. Ryan was being unfairly targeted. In his "War on the Left" manifesto, Mr. Breitbart said, "The Democrats are not only terrified of us, they're scared to death." Several other prominent conservatives have written similarly in defense of Mr. Ryan. Newt Gingrich was one of the few voices among the conservative talk radio community to criticize Breitbart.com, writing on his Facebook page this week that "I strongly object to the unnecessary hatred and ad hominem attacks on professionals who are doing a very good thing for the country." From the report in DailyKos: Ryan is an active Republican Party operative. In 2004, he was elected chairman of the Libertarian Party of North Carolina, a position he held until he resigned in 2005. According to a North Carolina Democratic Party press release, Ryan also "repeatedly trashed and demeaned North Carolina's Democratic Party with smear campaigns paid for by" the Republican Party. In addition, he spread misinformation about Elizabeth Dole's campaign for the U.S. Senate in North Carolina in 2000. Mr. Ryan has acknowledged that he spread false information about Ms. Dole, saying he had done so "entirely" as a Republican activist. "I did it by myself," he said in an interview. "I had no staff. I had to make it up as I went along." He added, "When it comes to political satire, satire is political."
